POETIC SPACES:
GOD AND THE POETRY OF OUR LIVES

William Dyrness
Professor of Theology and
Culture at Fuller
Theological Seminary

What are the “poetics of everyday life?” What can they teach us about God? Art, music, dance, and writing can certainly be “poetic,” but so can such diverse pastimes as fishing, skiing, or attending sports events. Any and all activities that satisfy our fundamental need for play, for celebration, and for ritual, says Dyrness, are inherently poetic. In Poetic Spaces He demonstrates that all such activities are places where God is active in the world.

Dyrness is author most recently of “Poetic Theology: God and the Poetics of Everyday Life.” There will be some copies of his book available.

We Hope to See You There!
